Full-Year Dissertation Fellowship Match

Graduate students fortunate enough to have a full-year fellowship in the final year of their doctoral program are able to fully focus on writing their dissertations.

Exceptional students across all disciplines benefit from the Full-Year Dissertation Fellowship Match program, in which gifts from donors are enhanced with additional funding to create an entire year of student support, allowing the student to finish their dissertation and complete their degree.

Through the match program, the donor makes a gift of $28,000 and the Graduate Division adds $14,000 to create a full-year fellowship of $42,000 for a student writing his or her dissertation. The fellowship funds tuition and fees, health insurance and a generous stipend.

AWARD RECIPIENT

Zuleyma Rogel | Ph.D. Candidate
UCSB Gervitz Graduate School of Education

“This fellowship provides me with an opportunity to pursue my dream career, a profound blessing. I can focus this academic year on not only finishing my dissertation but also on fiercely building my portfolio to be competitive for faculty positions.”
